Autumn Hidden Gems

SEVEN SHOWS TO WATCH

As the evenings draw in, here are seven mysteries worth seeking out — the kind that don't always make the "best of" lists, but reward the viewers who find them. Settle in, and enjoy.

NO. 01

Mrs. Wilson

WATCH ON PBS →

Ruth Wilson stars as a widow who discovers that her late husband's life was built on an extraordinary web of secrets. Inspired by Wilson's own family history, this compelling three-part drama is filled with startling revelations and powerful performances.

NO. 02

The Mrs. Bradley Mysteries

WATCH ON BRITBOX →

Diana Rigg is delightfully stylish and unconventional as Adela Bradley, an amateur detective with a sharp understanding of human behavior. Set during the 1920s, this witty period mystery combines unusual cases, elegant settings, and a wonderfully mischievous central character.

NO. 03

Quirke

WATCH ON BRITBOX →

Gabriel Byrne stars as Quirke, a troubled pathologist whose investigations lead him into the darkest corners of 1950s Dublin. Adapted from the novels by Benjamin Black, this beautifully filmed series offers noir atmosphere, complicated characters, and slow-burning mysteries.

NO. 04

McDonald & Dodds

WATCH ON BRITBOX →

A Bath-set detective duo pairing an ambitious DCI with a quietly brilliant, overlooked DS — warm chemistry, classic whodunit structure, and a setting as charming as the cases are clever.

NO. 05

Signora Volpe

WATCH ON ACORN TV →

A disillusioned former British spy trades London for the Italian countryside and can't help solving local mysteries — sunny, stylish, and genuinely under-the-radar.

NO. 06

Dead Still

WATCH ON ACORN TV →

In Victorian Dublin, a photographer who specializes in portraits of the recently deceased becomes connected to a disturbing series of murders. Darkly funny, macabre, and visually distinctive, this unusual mystery is especially well suited to autumn viewing.

NO. 07

Holding

WATCH ON ACORN TV →

When human remains are discovered in a quiet Irish village, a gentle local police officer must take charge of his first major investigation. Based on Graham Norton's novel, Holding blends mystery, dry humor, village secrets, and moving character drama.

The Tower

WATCH ON BRITBOX →

When a veteran police officer and a teenage girl fall to their deaths from a London tower block, Detective Sergeant Sarah Collins is brought in to investigate — and finds a cover-up reaching deep into the ranks of her own colleagues. Tense, morally complicated, and grounded in real procedural detail, it's the kind of slow-burn police drama that stays with you long after the credits roll.
